Awaken from this slumber Awaken from this dream Remove this blindfold Of perfect words That have done nothing But deceive I hope for voices To scream in harmony Against the stronghold That has taken so many By there throats I hope for voices To sing in harmony And for us to stand With bleeding hearts And to look away from the sky That offers us nothing but poison And to look at one another And to look at one another For this is your first glimpse Of purity This is reality Do not be deceived By the shallow beauty of words Your God Your writings Your actions Will burn to nothing In this war