

Been living under frozen sky,
but we've all got ways that we get by.
You changed your name,
the one you had it didn't fit right.
And I know you'd dream of something else
if you could sleep nights.

I know, so tonight I'll stay here with you.
There's nothing else I'd rather do.
We'll look for reasons for why we're here,
We'll blame the season for this fear.

I'll say everything'll work out
like I know what I'm talking about.
But all this snow keeps piling up,
we dig it's never deep enough.

Just need a change in atmosphere.
It's like winter's earlier each year.
Sidewalks across this town are icing up, we're sliding down.
Look for a place to drown, find a bar a block a way.

You're just a kid bruising up.
If I could tell you how many times you gotta fall before you break through

I would, so tonight I'll stay here with you.
There's nothing else I'd rather do.
We'll look for reasons for why we're here,
We'll blame the season for this fear.

I'll say everything'll work out
like I know what I'm talking about.
But all this snow keeps piling up,
we dig it's never deep enough.

Cold drinks and snow falls, I'll pick up your phone calls.
I get too wrapped up in my own shit.
We order one more round and sit.

And I know when you're living under sheets of snow
it can look like the worlds gone black but remember that the sun comes back.
At least they say it does. (3x)
