Out beyond the river where you and I would ride And we would skin the buffalo, the last ones left alive But once again it passed me by, I know it always will So now I spend my Sunday standing still

Sure we could have We could have got it right Sure we could have We could have got it right

And somewhere she is calling out on a scarlet plain But I no longer hear her - I grew out of those games I never skinned a buffalo, I never even killed That's why I spend my Sunday standing still

Sure we could have We could have got it right Sure we could have We could have got it right

Sure we could have We could have got it right Sure we could have We could have got it right

Sure we could have We could have got it right Sure we could have We could have got it right

Somewhere she is calling out on a scarlet plain
But I no longer hear her - I grew out of those games
I never skinned a buffalo, I never even killed
That's why I spend my Sunday standing still
