Lenders In The Temple

Conor Oberst

A short delay, the parrot blues
Little voices mimic you
It's not so hard to make that sound
So watch your back, the Ides of March
Cut your hair like Joan of Arc
Disguise your will, they'll find you out
And when they do
Look out

There's money-lenders inside the temple That circus tiger's gonna break your heart Something so wild turned into paper If I loved you, well that's my fault

A bitch in heat, the alpha male
Not something she'd ever tell
Except when she got deathly high
And out it came like summer rain
It washed the cars and everything
Felt clean for just a little while
A telethon
We drunk dialed

Those starving children they ain't got no mother There's pink flamingos living in the mall I'd give a fortune to your infomercial If somebody would just take my call Take my call Take my call

Hello

Patterns in my mind now moving slow Sorrow all across the surface rolls Smoothing out the edges of the stone The lights are out. Where'd everybody go? Alone

Erase yourself and you'll be free Mandala destroyed by the sea All we are is colored sand So pay to ride the ferris wheel Smile, all that you can feel Is gratitude for what has been 'Cause it did not Happen

There's money-lenders inside the temple That circus tiger's gonna break my heart Something so wild turned into paper If you love me, then that's your fault

There's money-lenders inside the temple This crystal city's gonna fall apart When all their power turns into vapor If I miss you, well that's my fault That's my fault That's my fault That's www.fault
