Seasons Change

Crystal Lewis

Are you going through a dry spell? yes, I've been there before Where the trees are slowly whithering Where their roots cry out for more where the desert floor is dry and cracked No clouds hang in the sky No winter rain or spring it seems No change in sight

But seasons change and then they pass no way to know how long they'll last I'd love to know the reasons why But God knows Seasons change and then they pass no way to know how long they'll last I'd love to know the reasons why But God knows Seasons change

Are you going through a dry spell? I've been there a time or two Where life seems to stay the same for a while You want to change but don't know how to It's the place where you feel empty inside Can't put your finger on the need I look at God and see what I want to be I look at me and see what I am

Are you going through a dry spell? I was there a while ago Now I've come to a place where the rain falls where the trees bear fruit and grow where I find a refuge in my God It's a place of surrender I know I look at God and see what I want to be He looks at me and sees His own
