Well I had a little feeling to have a big night

And I woke up feeling small and not so brave and not quite righ t

I had to face the who am I and where is she and what did I do But worst of all I had to face the big light

The big light came through my window and it opened up my eyelid s

And it snapped them up like roller blinds and told me things th at I did

I can't face another day and night of good ideas and complications

And I'm thankful that I didn't open another bottle of inspirati on

When the hangover this morning had a personality

And I cast my shattered mind over selected memories

I didn't even touch the light switch so I knew I'd never see

The Haggard face that would be staring back at me

The big light came through my window and it opened up my eyelid s

And it snapped them up like roller blinds and told me things th at I did

I can't face another day and night of good ideas and complications

And I'm thankful that I didn't open another bottle of inspirati on

Well I had a little feeling to have a big time
And I woke up to alarm bells like a big church chime
I had to face the who am I and who is she and what did I do
But worst of all I had to face the big light

The big light came through my window and it opened up my eyelid \mathbf{s}

And it snapped them up like roller blinds and told me things th at I did

I can't face another day and night of good ideas and complications

And I'm thankful that I didn't open another bottle of inspirati on