

You Must Have Walked Across My Mind Again

George Jones

I woke up downtown in jail again this mornin'
They say I went half crazy with the booze
Then they hit me one more time for no reason
But they can't hurt me, not half as much as you

You must have walked across my mind again
I don't recall what I've done or where I've been
I was holding my own, then everything went wrong
You must have walked across my mind again

That old jukebox won't be playing my favorite song no more
The bottle that I through knocked out it's lights
They say I damaged everything I put my hands upon
And one man might not make it through the night

You must have walked across my mind again
I don't recall what I've done or where I've been
I was holding my own, then everything went wrong
You must have walked across my mind again
