

Throwing A Line

Jon McLaughlin

You wanted to see all that I could be in in your life, your life
What if I fail though, I forget all the details on what's right
, what's right

I'm throwing a line, asking for help
This is more than I thought I think to myself
That living in love is trusting above myself

You gave me your heart what a place to start
All those empty scars and all those cold remarks
We're always promising that honesty would let us be inside each other's minds

I'm throwing a line asking for help
This is more than I thought I think to myself
That living in love is trusting above myself
Everyday I'm constantly trying to sacrifice
Cause I know despite me that living in love is trusting above myself

We wanted to feel with our hands something real
But we just can't seem to stop being what we're not
And fear you know it holds so tight
Makes me feel I've got no right to speak what I really think