Escape

Every few thousand years Come true man's greatest fears All the living things Mother nature brings - to tears

When the bombs are bursting in the air And the rockets are making that red glare I'm heading down Down to that good hope town - where the weather's fair

So why don't you come away With me my love We'll do what it takes I'll keep you safe

Why don't you stay by me And when the time comes We'll escape

When the big one finally hit's LA When Yellowstone has it's day We're heading to the southern tip On a plane or on a ship We'll do what it takes - we'll find a way

And if that cloud forms up above No sign anywhere of a dove There'll be no reason left to stay We'll try and live another day In a place where there's still love Kongos
