Sahara

Laurel Aitken

I knew a little girl And she was born in the ghetto I knew her so well She had stories to tell A mother and a fatherless child And she was always running wild She danced for all the men Every night in the caravan She was a mother and a fatherless child And she was always running wild Sahara! Sahara! I knew a little girl And she was born in the ghetto I knew her so well She had stories to tell A mother and a fatherless child And she was always running wild She danced for all the men Every night in the caravan She was a mother and fatherless child Always running wild Sahara! Sahara! Sahara! Sahara! I knew a little girl And she was born in the ghetto I knew her so well She had stories to tell A mother and a fatherless child And she was always running wild She danced for all the men Every night in the caravan She was a mother and a fatherless child Always running wild Sahara! Sahara!
