La Belle Dame Sans Merci

Loreena Mckennitt

What can ail thee, knight-at-arms
Alone and palely loitering?
The sedge has withered from the lake
And no birds sing

What can ail thee, knight-at-arms So haggard and so woe-begone? The squirrel's granary is full And the harvest's done

See a lily on thy brow With anguish moist and fever-dew And on thy cheeks a fading rose Fast withereth too

I met a lady in the meads Full beautiful, a fairy's child Her hair was long, her foot was light And her eyes they were wild

Set her on my pacing steed Nothing else saw all day long For sidelong would she bend And sing a fairy's song

I made a garland for her head And bracelets too, and fragrant zone She looked at me and she did love And made a sweet moan

She found me roots of relish sweet
And honey wild, and manna-dew
And sure in language strange she said
"I love thee true."

She took me to her Elfin grot And there she wept and sighed full sore And there I shut her wild, wild eyes With kisses four

And there she lulled me fast asleep And there I dreamed, ah, woe betide The strangest dream I ever dreamed On the cold hillside

I saw pale kings and princes too Pale warriors, death-pale were all They cried: "La Belle Dame sans Merci Hath thee in thrall!"

I saw their starved lips in gloam With horrid warning gaped wide And I awoke and found me here On the cold hillside

And this is why I sojourn here Alone and palely loitering

The sedge is withered from the lake $\mbox{\footnotemark}$ And no birds sing
