Symphony

Marié Digby

Here I go again in my dreamy eyes I should be content but something's just not satisfied, oh it's nothing that you did, I'm still on your side I can't love you if I'm not sure who I am inside

'Cause there are some questions that need some answers What is it I'm really after? The clock's ticking so I can't wait around

This is my now, this is my today No more sitting on the side waiting for my chance to play Time to step out, so much to say But I'll never get the chance if I don't break away And write my own symphony, write my own symphony I gotta write my own symphony, write my own symphony Just let me write my own symphony

I've always got my head way up in the clouds Something in me wants to fly away and leave the ground, oh If you could hear my thoughts when no one's around Then you'd understand my fear of being held down

Cause I wanna explore the world around me Dance under the stars above me And be free to make my own mistakes

This is my now, this is my today No more sitting on the side waiting for my chance to play Time to step out, so much to say But I'll never get the chance if I don't break away And write my own symphony, write my own symphony I gotta write my own symphony, write my own symphony Just let me write my own symphony
