Because I Told You So

Nick Lachey

If I gave you the sky, if I laid down my life Would you believe me then?

If I promised to change, if I carried the blame Would you believe me then?

Could you see it like me and believe what I see? Could you listen, and remember that I love you only? Because I told you, because I told you so

If you told me you lied but I stayed true and tried Would you believe me then?
And if your beauty was gone but my love lingered on Would you believe me then?

Could you see it like me and believe what I see? Could you listen and remember that I love you only? Because I told you, because I told you so

You take the wheel for now I'm too tired to drive this one home anyhow, for now

And when you mention my name Let this one thing remain, my love Believe me now

If I gave you the sky, if I laid down my life Would you believe me then?
If I promised to change, if I carried the blame
