I was playing every Monday on Burgundy in some shitty little bar

I was working on a novel called 'New Orleans Ain't No City', it 's a Scar

The heroine does heroin, the hero wears his hair just like The King

He says, "It ain't my job to sweet talk you, my job's just to s ing"

I was loved once by a woman She don't love me anymore, 504, 504 And I won't never know no woman like the one I'd known before 504, 504, and she don't love me anymore

Well, the hero wears a hair-net
From the outset he drinks Jax beer from a can
He says, "There's something 'bout this city always gets me
I'm a sentimental man"

Well the heroine plays violin And reads her Elmore Leonard everyday She's the one that finds the body He's the one that gets away

I was loved once by a woman She don't love me anymore, 504, 504 And I won't never know no woman like the one I'd known before 504, 504, and she don't love me anymore

I was loved once by a woman
She don't love me anymore, 504, 504
And I won't never know no woman like the one
I'd known before 504, 504
You know she had me singing Gospel out in the kitchen
On the floor 504, 504, and she don't love me anymore

No she don't love me anymore No she don't love me anymore, 504
