

The Power Of The Heart

Peter Gabriel

You and me we always sweat and we strain you look for sun and I look for rain we're different people, we're not the same the power of the sun I looked for treetops, you looked for caps above the water, where the waves snap back I flew around the world to bring you back ah the power of the heart you looked at me and I looked at you the sleeping heart was shining through the wispy cobwebs that we're breathing through

the power of the heart
I looked at you and you looked at me I thought of the past, you thought of what could be I asked you once again to marry me
the power of the heart

Everybody says love makes the world go round I hear a bubbling and I hear a sound of my heart beating and I turn around and find you standing at the door you know me I like to dream a lot of this and that and what is not and finally I figured out what was what it was the power of the heart

You and me we sweat and strain the result is always the same you think somehow we're in a game
the power of the heart
the power of the heart

I think I'm dumb I know you're smart the beating of a purebred heart I say this to you and it's not a lark marry me today
You know me I like to dream a lot of what there is and what there's not but mainly I dream of you a lot
the power of the heart
the power of the heart
