

Time Cube

Roger McGuinn

The planet was molded from great clouds of dust
Then molten eruptions would burst through the crust
A new sun was shining and covered the earth
The heavens all knowing acknowledged the birth

The seas were forming before life began
It would take a long time to crawl on the land
The rivers were waiting for the arrival
The lowlands provided a place of survival

Man came from the mud and the ooze and the slime
An integral part of a master design
He gazed at the stars and the moon in the sky
Some knew they were going and some wondered why

Man made a beginning and went to the moon
A few fellow creatures predicted earth's doom
His colonisation out into space is more than
A great leap for the whole human race

Some dream of a journey to the neighboring star
And some will not listen, they say it's too far
He'll create a machine and launch it someday
To reach Alpha Centauri four light years away

Then evolve to the stars of our galaxy
And write a new chapter of man's destiny
Man came from the mud and the ooze and the slime
An integral part of a master design
