There's something about you
That reminds me of all those times
When I wasn't sorry, when I wasn't blue
The cherry moon it shone down on us
Under the stars shining down every one for you
If I could count them all
I would circle the moon
And count 'em back to nothing
Till I got to you

Something in you dies, when it's over Everybody cries sometimes If loving you's a dream That's not worth having Then why do I dream of you?

I used to be the house that you lived in
Down on Meadowlake Street
When you moved they cut down the maple tree
I carved your name into
The tree became a boat, I christened it your name
And when the water turned to salt
From your tears it hit the bottom of the ocean
Where I go when I hear your name
And I sink like a stone

Something in you dies, when it's over Everybody cries sometimes If loving you's a dream That's not worth having Then why do I dream of you? Why do I dream of you i feel like a dream that's not having Like a nervous joke ain't nobody laughing Like somebody with nothing 'cause they don't know What they're wanting Tiny like the sand in the cracks of drift wood Washed up on the shore of an ocean of you Boats out on the horizon Made of the maple tree where we used to lie down On Meadowlake Street counting the stars you and I You and I Something in you dies when it's over Everybody cries sometimes If loving you's a dream that's not worth having Then why do I dream of you Why do I dream of you Why
