

Blue Days

Suzy Bogguss

There are times when I get to lonely
There are times when I think I'm in this world alone
There are days, when I let it all get to me
Then I turn to you and you smile that smile
Through the eyes of love
It's all worth while
And those blue days
Turn to new days once again

There are times you know I tend to worry
Little things from my mind
And they get all over me
And I don't believe
I'll ever see that sunrise
But then morning comes and you awake
And I see the sunshine on your face
And those blue days
Turn to new days once again

In your eyes I see reflections of the woman
That I'd like to be
You're always there for me
When blue days come along

Looking back and all the storms we weathered
You were always my umbrella in the rain
Standing strong for the worse or better
I just turn to you and you smile that smile
Through the eyes of love
It's all worth while
And those blue days
Turn to new days once again

Yes those blue days
Turn to new days once again
