We stepped out of the brittle frame And I heard her as she came Through the city-streets And the lavish lover-suites Man standing next to man He's alone I see only faces I don't know I see faces staring Other faces staring Don't talk, don't tell We stepped out and sought for height And I looked for a single star Through a starlit sky And the fangles of sheets There's nothing to expect from this place We don't understand what is said We're human, we're alone So confused We've lost all our means And we'll lose Now the sight greys out And we wonder what we're doing in a place like this It's so bright outside In a non-white, flash-light way of Sometime Now, tomorrow, anytime I see faces staring Other faces staring Don't talk, don't tell We're waiting For morning No sign of it I'm listening Can't hear it Are we sure we didn't miss it? I see faces staring Other faces staring Don't talk, don't tell.
