On bended knee
I've looked through every window then.
Touched the bottom,
The night a sleepless day instead;

A day when love came, Came easy like what's lost now found. Beneath a blinding light That would surround.

We were without, in doubt, (and now) we were about saving for a rainy day.

I crashed through mirrors,
I crashed through floors of laughter then.
In a blind scene,
No ties would moor us to this room.

A day when love came, Came easy like what's lost now found. And you would save me, And I held you like you were my child.

If I were you, defiant you, Alone upon a troubled way. I would send my heart to you To save it for a rainy day.
