

And by the stars above
I can tell your name.
You've returned,
though the bridge was burned
and you brought the flame.
And by their lies you rise,
smile upon their cues.
Once you get what you came for you go and you drop the rues.

You look down on me,
tell what you see,
numbers on a screen.
Don't you dare deny,
time to do or dire,
there's no in between.

And now the justice blind,
the papers signed.
And in the end
you defend by pretending
the kill was kind.
Murder in your eyes,
smile upon your face.
And by the stars we can tell
that you are an amazing disgrace.

Looking down on me,
all your eyes can see
only dollar green.
I looked up instead,
all I saw was red.
It's time we intervene.

You look down on me,
Tell me what you see,
numbers on a screen.
Looking back at you,
I can see right through,
you're not what you seem.
Looking down on me,
All that you can see
is that dollar green.
I looked up instead,
all I saw was red.
It's time we intervene.
