

You took an hour or two and then we packed
Ready for another coastline, again

You only knew a couple of words but that don't matter
Headed for another coastline, again

We don't belong here now
They should shoot us looking down
We don't belong here now
They should shoot us looking down

It only helped an hour or two
And then we're lost
Stranded on another coast line, forever

And there we were dying for gas and then we knew
Everything about the coastline was true

We don't belong here now
They should shoot us looking down
We don't belong here now
They should shoot us looking down

Around it
We found it
Around it
We found it

We only left an hour ago and now we feel
Stranded on another coastline, together
