

I've been down this lonely road before
I'm here to say it don't get better
That summer photo leaves me hurting more and my opinion doesn't matter
Don't want to think about the fun we had I won't pretend to care

Don't want to hear about what was said, your heart was never there
You said rejection used to turn you on that was your one burning confession
Never the one to care and now you're feeling lonely
I really hope you've learned your lesson

Don't want to think about the fun we had I won't pretend to care
Don't want to think about what was said your heart was never there
Every time we played the game I thought that I would go insane
My feelings never counted

You played me like a violin, with that silly little grin
My feelings still amounted to nothing, didn't give a damn
Next time you think about what we had just remember all the moments
We shared together while you shared them with those summer photos

You had stolen
Don't want to think about what we had I won't pretend to care
Don't want to think about what was said your heart was never there
Don't want to think about what we had your heart was never there

Don't want to think about what was said I won't pretend to care
