

Lonely

98 Degrees

I caught myself again laying in bed starring at your picture
I told myself I wouldn't do that anymore.
The afternoon is my morning, it's almost 4PM
Before I get up and drag myself out the door.

It's like my whole world is in slo-mo
And I lost the one thing that made it go.

So now I just walk around, reliving that moment
Over and over and over again
I'm so lonely.
If I knew then what I know now
I wouldn't keep calling and hanging up
Over and over and over again
Cause I'm so lonely.

The answers always seem to come after the damage is done
Life's little way of laughing in your face.
I can't unbreak the broken heart
So I sympathize by let me fall apart.

So now I just walk around, reliving that moment
Over and over and over again
I'm so lonely.
If I knew then what I know now
I wouldn't keep calling and hanging up
Over and over and over again
I'm so lonely.

And punishment I deserve for what I did
Anything but this.
Baby, slap me in my face, ignore me for three days,
But please don't go and stay away.

So now I just walk around, reliving that moment
Over and over and over again
I'm so lonely.
If I knew then what I know now
I wouldn't keep calling and hanging up
Over and over and over again
I'm so lonely.
Lonely, lonely, lonely, lonely.
