

Anchored Down

A Faylene Sky

This is my heart. This is my home.
And I will fight with every breath that I own,
To make sure you know that will never change.
And I may be living all my dreams, but you still mean the world to me.
So no matter how far it seems, just don't forget about me.

Cause I've been waking up alone for so long and all that I know is,
When it rains it pours. When it rains it pours.
It's raining even harder now. I can't sleep, can't forget how y our voice sounds.
And the way that you looked at me, you made me somebody.

And if I have to miss you, I swear I'll make you proud.
I won't let this go to my head, You're never gonna be just anot her face in the crowd.
Cause I know where ever I go you'll be there in spirit.
Your name still rings in every note that I sing, And I hope you can hear it.

Cause I've been waking up alone for so long and all that I know
is,
When it rains it pours. When it rains it pours.
our voice sounds.
And the way that you looked at me, you made me somebody.

How long will half of my heart be enough?
We're oceans apart, and this might be too much to ask,
But I meant it when I told you, you gave me something to come h ome to.
So I'll hold these notes as long as these words still hold thei r weight,
Hope will be an anchor holding us into place.

And I've been waking up alone for so long and all that I know i s,
This is my heart. This is my home. And when it rains it pours.
It's raining even harder now. I can't sleep, can't forget how y our voice sounds.
(Don't tell me that the distance, will never make a difference.

And the way that you looked at me, you made me somebody.
(Cause it makes the heart grow fonder. It makes the heart grow fonder.)

It makes the heart grow fonder. It makes the heart grow fonder
