

Face To Face

A Loss for Words

Here we are again,
Face to face with ourselves,
And we're hating every second of it.
What have I done to deserve this?
'Cause I'm not that person
And I can't be certain that this isn't just a dream.
So won't you pinch my cheeks and wake me from sleep?
Won't you wake me from sleep?

Let's get away from this place of great liars and awful things.
'Cause I can't stomach the way that every face I see has something hidden beneath it.
Yeah, we all have our secrets, but should it be such a rarity to find some sincerity.
My strength is giving in. With each set of eyes there's something hidden inside.
They're so cruel and pretentious. I can read their intentions.

I am surrounded by strangers with familiar faces,
But they've all been tainted with dishonesty and lies.
I guess that's just normal in their simple lives.
No one even knows my name.
To be honest I'd prefer it that way.
I'd prefer it that way.

Let's get away from this place of great liars and awful things.
'Cause I can't stomach the way that every face I see has something hidden beneath it.
Yeah, we all have our secrets, but should it be such a rarity to find some sincerity.
My strength is giving in. With each set of eyes there's something hidden inside.
I'm surrounded by strangers with familiar faces.