

There Is Still A Dream

Aaron Neville

When will we open our eyes and finally discover
We are united by one blood?
When will we realize we're sisters and brothers
And what the world needs now is love?
There's a dreamer inside each one of us who wants to believe

There is still a dream to believe in
There is still a hope after hope is gone
We could be the Father's hands
And give peace a chance
And show the world, there is still a dream

A brother down on his luck fallen to chances
We could pick the brother up
A sister down on her knees prayin' for answers
Why don't you show the sister love?
All over the world life is unjust but I do believe

There is still a dream to believe in
There is still a hope after hope is gone
We could be the Father's hands
And give peace a chance
And show the world there is still a dream

And everyone needs one
'Cause no one is freed from
The worries of life that drag us down
If you can't make it my hands can take it
We'll stand together and pray

There is still a dream to believe in
There is still a hope after hope is gone
We could be the Father's hands
And give peace a chance
And show the world

There is still a dream to believe in
There is still a hope after hope is gone
We could be the Father's hands
And give peace a chance
And show the world there is still a dream
There is still a dream
