

I Wish I Were You

Aaron Sprinkle

In these recent years I have noticed that your face has slightly changed

In this season of the bitter pill that pulled your heart away

In the daylight when it hits you straight on

See the lines in your face have begun

When I tell you that you're beautiful like a second hand that stopped

You remind me of a waterfall that turned the earth to mud

In this season of the bitter pill that pulled your heart away

Feel it coming in again

All that you've known up till now

You could trade for this thought I'm singing about

That now and again I'll play the fool

But I love you so much I wish I were you

All that you've known up till now

You could trade for this thought i'm singing about

That now and again I'll play the fool

But I love you so much I wish I were you
