I Wish I Were You

Aaron Sprinkle

In these recent years I have noticed that your face has slightly changed

In this season of the bitter pill that pulled your heart away In the daylight when it hits you straight on See the lines in your face have begun

When I tell you that you're beautiful like a second hand that s topped

You remind me of a waterfall that turned the earth to mud In this season of the bitter pill that pulled your heart away Feel it coming in again

All that you've known up till now
You could trade for this thought I'm singing about
That now and again I'll play the fool
But I love you so much I wish I were you

All that you've known up till now
You could trade for this thought i'm singing about
That now and again I'll play the fool
But I love you so much I wish I were you
