No Life

I do not belong in this life I do not belong in this house I do not belong in this job I do not belong in this world

I do not belong in this life I do not belong in this house I do not belong in this job I do not belong in this world

I feel engulfed in fire The world holds too much pain And if for nothing I seem to tire The devil still holds his claim

I do not belong in this life I do not belong in this house I do not belong in this job I do not belong in this world

I do not belong in this life I do not belong in this house I do not belong in this job I do not belong in this world

If fuel is stacking higher My place holds too much shame And if for nothing I seem to tire The devil still holds his claim

I, I, I do not belong

I do not belong in this life I do not belong in this house I do not belong in this job I do not belong in this world

I do not belong in this life I do not belong in this house I do not belong in this job I do not belong in this world

I, I, I do not belong