

Across the Gray Waters

Adramelech

Through the gray waters of Styx a ferryman steers his boat Charon the carrier of souls approaches the twilight bank

On the bank there's a shape the god Hermes with the dead souls he's waiting Charon to carry them to Hades

Charon takes the souls to their afterlife beyond the dark gray waters to the world of god Hades

The gates leading to afterworld guarded by Cerberus no soul could return to life no soul could pass this three-headed dog

Through the gates they arrive to the terminal of their paths Erinyids vigilant eyes watching them with hate

Forgive me the sins I've done Forgive me the lies I've told Erinyids have no feelings filthy souls shall suffer those merciless beasts lurking for the lost