

Deluge

After the Burial

And I was over taken, over whelmed and out of control
Visitors on parallel trails, unknowingly bound
Blue solitaires deluge, though I felt that I could swim
Sight kept on the skyline so we become builders of ships
Aiming to be forgotten, waiting for the rain to regress
I'll never look back, nothing really mattered 'til now
Decades waiting to be caught in your wind
And when your voice gave notes it pushed my sails

We found safety glowing within ourselves
Just two children waiting at the window for the rain to stop
We found safety glowing within ourselves
Just two children waiting at the window for the rain to stop

Decades became wading but we were never meant for a watery grave
Trapped in trivial downpour, decades became wading
But we were never meant for a watery grave

In solace, finding our footing, stepping out onto dry land
Dawning a life of worth discovering a glow within Blue solitaires deluge broke down walls and I gave in

Everything and anything I ever wanted really never meant
There's so much greater gifts to give, we finally found a way
Everything and anything I ever wanted really never meant
There's so much greater gifts to give
Never meant for a watery grave

We found safety glowing within ourselves
Just two children waiting at the window for the rain to stop
We found safety glowing within ourselves
Just two children waiting at the window for the rain to stop
We were never meant for a watery grave
