

Heart Turns Black

Alexz Johnson

In the moonlight,
from across the street,
through the pouring rain,
I still hear her speak

Memories turn black
As the water spills, an alarm is heard and it gives me chills

How do you feel with the lights turned down?
You can't go home again
You're running out your mouth
How do you feel
when the heart turns black?
You can't find love again
You can't look back
when a heart turns black

I choose to run
but the lines all fade I've become someone
I can't even face

When the road, it stops and you can't escape, and your eyes, they burn You're in a reckless state

How do you feel
with the lights turned down?
You can't go home again
You're running out your mouth
How do you feel
when the heart turns black?
You can't find love again
You can't look back

Then, a heart turns black

In the moonlight,
from across the street,
through the pouring rain,
I still hear her speak

How do you feel
with the lights turned down?
How do you feel
when the heart turns black?

when a heart turns
