Sing Low, Sweet Cheerio

Alice Cooper

Forget, remember nothing The force came from the flame I pass along the path inside My light shining always We'll get there first a name cried out And looked back all the way Recall falling down a lot of time was spent that way But this story staring me has already begun 'Cuz I had some vision in my sight On the journey to be one Help me, help please, help me please The screaming starts again But the trick I find something hid You look, you find, I win While working while the play was on The play was alright then Think thoughts, big thoughts Take off and go back next week again Right then my story ended And a new one had begun 'Cuz I had some vision in my sight On the journey to be one
