

And as for Love

Alphaville

...That I denied one time too many
She left me at the break of day
When I awoke she seemed still spinning in my head
But she was gone, the capsule empty
And her body dead
Was all she'd left behind without a last adieu
Sometimes I wonder if she'd left a hundred years ago
To start anew we need to be strangers from now on
And as for love we need to be strangers from now on

And I remember when she came into my life
It didn't count who she was or what I was like
I never meant to hurt her but she never did
Her name was love, her bodies infinite
And now she is gone, the capsule empty
And her body dead
To start anew we need to be strangers from now on
And as for love we need to be strangers from now on...
