

The Myriad

Andre Matos

Among the myriad of green another grief has been heard today it flew tearing out again all the way through the landscapes of light 'till the dawning is killing the night

And how much time will be left to paint the blue on the firmament and nothing will be changed nothing else will resist without care and the last regret harder to bear

Who said you're invincible is not at your side now, not at your side now somedays we're invisible, no one can see us out in the myriad your prayers cannot prevent what's meant to be broken, it's gotta be broken
it's not just a miracle consider it a virtue to be caught in the myriad...

You made your way to the light and now no reason retrocede but once it starts to burn feels so useless to capture the fire, oh oh and nature is ready for war! awake again it's all inside of you this feeling has to stand the coldest winds that freeze and bind you you're about to see the true face of nature the selfish won't be spared succumb in the end that's all they search for!

Who said you're invincible
is not at your side now, not at your side now
somedays we're invisible, no one can see us
out in the myriad
your prayers cannot prevent
what's meant to be broken,
it's gotta be broken
it's not just a miracle
consider it a virtue to be caught in the myriad...