Patrick Sheehan

Andy M. Stewart

My name is Patrick Sheehan, and my years are thirty-four; Tipperary is my native place, not far from Galtymore; I came of honest parents, but now they're lying low; Though' many's the pleasant days we spent in the Glen of Aherlo W.

My father died; I closed his eyes, outside the cabin door; For the landlord and the sheriff too, were there the day before , And then my lovin' mother, and my sisters three, also, Were forced to go with broken hearts, from the Glen of Aherlow

For three long months, in search of work, I wandered far and ne ar; I then went to the poorhouse to see my mother dear; The news I heard near broke my heart, but still in all my woe, I blessed the friends who made their graves in the Glen of Aher low.

Bereft of home and kith and kin, with plenty all around, I starved within my cabin, and slept upon the ground; But cruel as my lot was, I never did hardship know, Till I joined the English army, far away from Aherlow.

"Rouse up there," cried the corporal, "Ya lazy Irish hound! Why don't you hear the bugle, its call to arms to sound? " I found I had been dreaming of the days long, long ago, And I woke upon Sebastopol, and not in Aherlow

I tried to find my musket, how dark I thought the night! O blessed God! It wasn't dark, it was the broad daylight! And when I found that I was blind, my tears began to flow, And I longed for even a pauper's grave in the Glen of Aherlow.

A poor neglected mendicant, I wander Dublin's streets My nine months' pension it being out, I beg from all I meet; As I joined my country's tyrants, my face I can never show, Amongst my dear old neighbors in the Glen of Aherlow.

So Irish youths, dear countrymen, take heed in what I say; For if you join the English ranks, you'll surely rue the day And whenever you're tempted, a-soldiering to go. Remember poor blind Sheehan from the Glen of Aherlow.
