

A Hollow Daze

Anna Waronker

A hollow daze fills all the air
The same which fills all of me
The rain will come because it does
And flowers bloom to lift them up
But not for me they'll do no good
Though I still love they've tried enough

And hopes will further grow
While on and on and on they spin
With little doubt but little fear

Except the fear that there'll be tears
And some may laugh but I don't know
And I don't know but want to soon
Someday I will

A hollow daze fills all the air
The same which fills all of me
The rain will come because it does
And flowers bloom to lift them up

And hopes will further grow
While on and on and on they spin
With little doubt but little fear

Except the fear that there'll be tears
And some may laugh but I don't know
And I don't know but want to soon
Someday I will

A hollow daze fills all the air
The same which fills all of me

And hopes will further grow
While on and on and on they spin
With little doubt but little fear
Except the fear that there'll be tears
And some may laugh but I don't know
And I don't know but want to soon
One day I will, one day I will
One day I will, one day I will
