

Everybody

Asaf Avidan

Everybody wants somebody
A little more than they should
Everybody'd take that body
If Everybody could

Everybody makes mistakes
Everybody hides
Everybody'd write these words
If Everybody'd hide

Everybody needs somebody
To warm them up at night
I guess a blanket's not enough
When turning off the light

Everybody hurts and cries
Everybody dies
Every love cuts deep and cold
And breaks you down inside

Everybody else's grass is greener
Everybody else's wife is sweeter

Everybody wears their boots
Until the sole runs dull
And Everybody's ears are itching
From waiting for the toll

Everybody says they're sorry
And means it from the bone
Everybody never say it
Until they are alone

Everybody knows the score
Still want to see the game
Everybody clutch their lives
Like fifteen minute fame

Everybody says they're sorry
Still no one there replies
Everybody made mistakes but
Everybody made mistakes but
So did everybody else from time to time