

Starlinked Innerness

Ashent

Have you ever stopped a while to watch the sky Feeling something strange inside you?
It's like a newborn butterfly that spreads her wings to face with fear the emptiness

Hearts beat like distant echoes of bursted cores
A rhythmic pulse of the surrounding void
Wraps with mystery and cradles us
In the darkness

What's destiny written in our genetic code?
Our ash will be part of all
part of immense nothingness
in a sneeze of universe

Eyes gaze at millions lights shining in the night sky
our innerness is linked to the stars like a small child to his mother's womb
lost in infinitum
We all are part of a majestic draw Grains of sand in a cosmic cauldron moved around by the hand of a god
lost steps in aeternum

Hearts beat like distant echoes of bursted cores
A rhythmic pulse of the surrounding void
Wraps with mystery and cradles us
In the darkness

What's destiny written in our genetic code?
Our ash will be part of all
part of immense nothingness
in a sneeze of universe

Eyes gaze at millions lights shining in the night sky
our innerness is linked to the stars
like a small child to his mother's womb
lost in infinitum
We all are part of a majestic draw
Grains of sand in a cosmic cauldron
moved around by the hand of a god
lost steps in aeternum