

To Fall Asleep Might Mean To Fall Apart

Lane, Asher

anna sits in the corner she doesn't answer the phone time keeps slipping away while she's staring at the wall there's just no way to put down in words how she felt that day when the doctor told her about the end of her world anna hides in the corner but no one hears her cry and all the dreams she carried inside keep on falling from her eyes all that she's thinking it's just not fair kids are playing outside but nothing's the same she knows they'll still be there when she's already gone she whispers a prayer
'please don't let me fade into oblivion' she's afraid of the dark that's why she stays awake every night is tearing her apart
