Complacent

You're growing complacent
You forgot what it all meant
And chose the path of convenience

The road you took to where you're standing now Was fraught with obstacles that tore you down They made you drown

The path of least resistance called your name A status quo you tried hard to maintain But it wasn't the same

Sweet denial, take your leave
You must have others to deceive
I'm so tired of drifting backwards standing still
So throw the towel in, if you must Give up hope and give up trust
And I promise you'll drift backwards standing still

Something changed in you when you gave up When you decided that you had tried enough The price was too much

The inconsistencies seemed plain to see A swift departure from reality How blind can you be?

Sung to sleep by sycophantic choirs You preferred the company of liars Who made you feel admired

But one by one they turned their backs on you The ranks of your detractors grew and grew When they learned the truth