I'm kicking that stone down your street alone And the walls criticize where I have gone I'm throwing that stone through your open door And the halls seem to tell me I am wrong

I'm taking the long way home
Where everything's overgrown
Just like the boy trying to give it away
I regret tomorrow

I'm taking the long way home
Whatever may come and go
Just like the boy trying to give it away
I regret tomorrow more than yesterday

Remember that wall where we used to hide And the world seemed so dark and cold outside Remember that field where we used to kiss And the rain washed away our secret list

I'm taking the long way home
Where everything's overgrown
Just like the boy trying to give it away
I regret tomorrow

I'm taking the long way home
Whatever may come and go
Just like the boy trying to give it away
I regret tomorrow more than yesterday

Nobody's home and I feel lost inside There's a clock counting down what's left of time When you're all alone it's easy to hesitate Like a girl listening to her heart break

I'm taking the long way home
Where everything's overgrown
Just like the boy trying to give it away
I regret tomorrow

I'm taking the long, taking the long
Taking the long, taking the long
Taking the long way home
I'm taking the long way home

I'm taking the long way home
Where everything's overgrown
Just like the boy trying to give it away
I regret tomorrow

I'm taking the long way home
Whatever may come and go
Just like the boy trying to give it away
I regret tomorrow more than yesterday
