

Identity

August Burns Red

Do you know how it feels to hide with thoughts repressed deep down inside?

I guess you just loved the lie.

Truth is, you can't decide where my heart resides.

You want to cure me of this epidemic.

You call me sick.

I wish I had said it, the words to admit to you who I am.

My entire life I was dealt the wrong hand and cast aside from the man that I am.

I've never felt so free. It kills me to hear you say you "choose to love me."

I was hoping that would be a given, given our history.

You think I'm wrong but I never felt better.

Stop living in denial. Stop loving the lie.

I thought blood was thicker than water.

You think I'm wrong but I never felt better.

I know I disappointed you, but I've got nothing to prove.

My entire life I was dealt the wrong hand, but now I've realized this is who I am.

I've made my decision. You're either with or against me.

Stop living in denial. Stop loving the lie.

I thought blood was thicker than water.

You think I'm wrong but I never felt better.

I know I disappointed you, but I've got nothing to prove.

My entire life I was dealt the wrong hand, but now I've realized this is who I am.

I've made my decision. You're either with or against me.

Stop living in denial. Stop loving the lie.

I thought blood was thicker than water.

You think I'm wrong but I never felt better.

I'm standing firm. It's who I am. You can't keep me down.

I'm moving on. I'm living free. You can't stop me now.