

Looking Up

Autopilot Off

You figured this should be natural.
It's just what you need but too much keeps getting in your way.
You know it's never that easy.
You know it always gets complicated.
Now you're frantic, suspicious, and you pay a price
for everything
It might be the only chance you get.
After a life time of regrets, it finally looks like things are looking up so don't look down.
I don't want to see you falling.

You thought you would have all the answers,
but what's right now seems to be all wrong.
You're fed up. You give up. You've come too far for far too long.

Too much is expected of you,
so are you going to make the right decision now?
You're empty-handed once again.

I don't want to see you falling down.
