Subdued & Arrested

But what about them With broken wings What about them We've become so indifferent Is there a stance one could take To break the infrastructure Is there a single thing that you would die for? When all's said I don't see what you see But you believe Truthfully

There's a stance you can take To break the infrastructure There's a single thing that you would die for It's blood red

I don't see what you see But you believe It's come full circle now They finally came to break the home Taking everything to dictate you're not your own Your conflicts infinitely built And your reactions may not be sound But they're the only thing Between love for family And finding closure now
