Solemn regret, transgressions fill my head A measure of success is how well to forget And the past is dead

Strewn about the battlefield of life are the remainders of hist ory

When convenient we exalt them and pay them such respect As if we're all in an equivalent trajectory

And trash piles high in the rubble we forgot The angels of our nature just sit and watch it rot

Now, the past is dead Let's focus on tomorrow instead Oh the tragic present said The past is dead

Who can say what constitutes the most important sector of society?

The dominant portion seek an instant gratification And are proud of intellectual poverty

I'd like to be empathetic but I can't
The jeopardy is too great to make a stand

Now the past is dead Good deeds won't help you get ahead The modern signpost read the past is dead

My next great decision is just lying in wait The action might turn out to be the world's most grievous mista  $\ensuremath{\text{ke}}$

The past is dead More veritable words have never been said The tragic present said the past is dead
