Where The Trees Stand Still

Bebo Norman

Everyone it seems Is looking for the grass that's greener here And through my window pane The scenery flies by and disappears So tell to me the secret That won't let the memories fade away Until I am home again, where the trees stand still

Yesterday it seems I traveled in a younger man's clothes Living out this dream And wandering through fields of touch and go Moving on forever Watching the distance fade away But now I just want to land, where the trees stand still

All this time On this line Here then I am gone

Tonight I want a life Where the faces are the same most every day Tonight I want a wife To sit with me and watch our children play All the world between us Watching the years fade away And when the laughing's done, we'll watch the trees stand still

Everyday, where the trees stand still We will make a home, where the trees stand still
