

Hemoglobin

Beborn Beton

Every killing is a treat
Hemoglobin, hemoglobin

Over the years, I've slain by gallons everyday
And soon the time has come
That every victim tasted just the same
I used to think that every killing is a treat
But I was wrong, for I was young
I'd let them suffer, let them bleed

Bloodstain, hemoglobin, swallowing your energy
Bloodstain, hemoglobin, suck you dry and lick you clean

I keep counting centuries
Like moments passing by
With my own eyes I have seen ages come
And leave the mortal stage
You know I've drained about a million men or more
But there was nothing like
The first two hundred times
I died before
