

Morning Sun

Before the Dawn

You can't carry me
I am too heavy inside
You don't have the strength
To get me untied
Beyond salvation
Don't really care at all Unleash the tide
And let the waters fall

It broke me into little pieces
With edged razor sharp
glass drawing my skin Sharpened by my sins
Aim to rebuild with self-hatred and guilt

Save me
From the morning sun Rewrite my fate
and let this life be undone

The ocean swallows me into the depths of ages Darkness as old as the earth
Demons' hive
This crushing abyss
A bliss called life

At the edge of dawn forthcoming light will burn my eyes and leave me blind Solar flares torch my skin and wind blows the ashes away
